

2018 ANNUAL REPORT

9 COUNTRIES, 197,097 PEOPLE

Great need, targeted aid

Thanks and goodbye!

I visited the SWISSAID projects in the highlands of Ecuador for a week (at my own expense). SWISSAID will be leaving the country in 2021 after over 40 years. And I will be stepping down in the middle of the year and handing over the reins of SWISSAID to someone else. What I saw in Ecuador: the water supply systems in the Andes still work perfectly more than 20 years after they went into operation. Pipes, reservoirs and intermediate basins were built back then voluntarily by local people, while SWISSAID paid for the materials and the engineers. Nowadays, the locals have organised the water supply in the villages very well, and the water price is low. The finances are sufficient for maintenance and renovations. The children go to school in the morning instead of having to carry water. Democracy is exercised on a small-scale in the water supply: the boards of the water committees are elected democratically, and the finances are in the hands of the community.

Thanks for every donation

What I learned in Ecuador: there is something you can do about poverty and misery! SWISSAID's modest funds have exerted some leverage. Helping people to help themselves. The impetus for this came from the financial support from Switzerland. Thank you sincerely for your support. But hardship still prevails in our partner countries. Water is becoming even scarcer as the climate warms up. I learnt a great deal about that over the course of 11 years at SWISSAID. The most valuable lesson was that we can safeguard our future by working together and taking responsibility.

Thank you from the bottom of my heart!

SWISSAID

Effective year at SWISSAID on human rights

Markus Allemann
Managing Director

I was on my way back from Nicaragua when I took another look at the Declaration of Human Rights. Beside the ground-breaking manifesto lay the figures about our income, which left us with a deficit for 2018. I found it difficult to reconcile the two documents.

On the one hand, there was the need that we were trying to tackle; and on the other hand, the contributions we received to help us do that were falling. Article 3 of the declaration leads: “Everyone has the right to life, liberty and the security of person.” People there live in extreme poverty and have to get by on a dollar a day. Article 7: “All are equal before the law and are entitled without any discrimination to equal protection of the law.” Indigenous people there are losing their land and can only assert their rights with the backing of SWISSAID. Article 16: “The family is the natural and fundamental group unit of society and is entitled to protection by society and the State.” There are many SWISSAID projects there which are enabling families to have access to food all year round and to make a living.

Change in mindset

During my first year at SWISSAID, I personally got to know about the work we do in Ecuador, Colombia, India and Chad and am amazed by the dedication and professionalism displayed by our people on the ground. Agroecology provides hungry people with specific tools to meet their basic needs themselves. And that is just the beginning.

Compost doesn’t just mature on the ground. A transformation is also taking place at society level. Thanks to our cooperation, groups of women, men and young people are taking their destiny into their own hands and bringing about change. I encountered groups of women in Chad who are making a public stand against FGM, which is a courageous thing to do. In India, teaching materials which have been developed by partners are being used in classrooms nationwide, rolled out millions of times over. Agroecological cultivation techniques are creating good prospects in Colombia, underpinning the peace in a country which has been blighted by civil war.

Yet despite that, SWISSAID is facing financial challenges. We are reorganising ourselves internally, because it is not only a matter of saving costs and reviewing processes, but also of accessing new sources of finance. This process will define SWISSAID beyond 2019.

We will unfortunately have to go down this road without our president Ruedi Rechsteiner. Nothing has been beyond him for the past eleven years. His heart beats for SWISSAID. He has been a vital support for us with his breadth of experience in politics, society and business. We are very grateful for that. The Board of Trustees will appoint his successor in June.

We also owe a debt of gratitude to you, our donors. Without your support, we would not be able to carry out our urgent work. A huge thank you for your support in the past and in the future!

Impact at a glance

Behind every figure there are countless stories, tears of joy and hard work – crucially influenced by the self-help projects that have been implemented thanks to the support of the donors.

A thousand thanks!

10,142
men and women

attended workshops in all countries on gender equality, around 1,500 more than in the previous year.

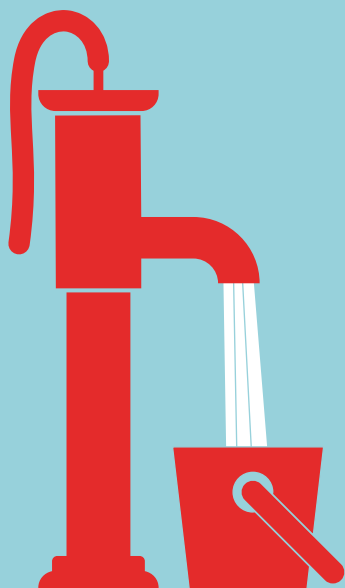

8,005
women

learned literacy and numeracy skills in Niger, Chad and Guinea-Bissau, 2,300 more than the previous year. These skills not only boost confidence, they also protect women from being taken advantage of at the market. If you can count the change, you win.

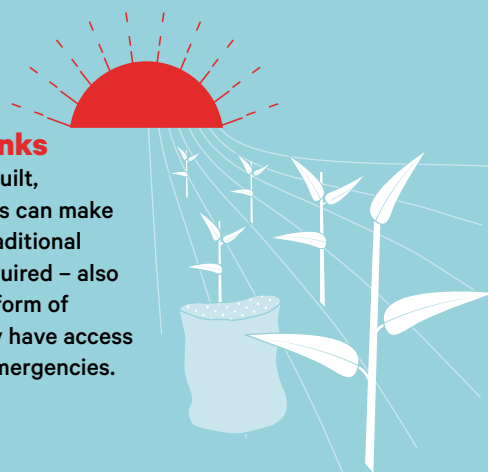

46,630 men, women and children

now have access to clean drinking water or can irrigate their fields and reap harvests that are enough to help them get by and no longer endure starvation. Thanks to clean water, infant mortality rates are falling significantly. As a result of major projects having been phased out, we reached around 4,400 people fewer in the area of water last year.

778 grain and seed banks

a type of storage facility, have been built, maintained and managed. The families can make “deposits” in the form of grain and traditional seeds and withdraw them later as required – also on “credit”, which is paid back in the form of seeds or grain. This ensures that they have access to a supply of high quality seeds in emergencies.

3,954 women's groups were supported, for example, with microloans, further training courses in bookkeeping and running organisations or in combating domestic violence.

27 livestock banks

in Niger, Myanmar (Burma) and Guinea-Bissau ensured that many families benefited from the animals that were given in. The families who benefit from this are obliged to hand over some of their newly born livestock to other families in the village.

24,032 women

cultivated huge gardens during the dry season, providing their families with healthy vegetables.

Project sponsorships

The past year has been greatly characterised by the theme of quality, which has led to growth in women's project sponsorships.

792 sponsors for women's projects

492 sponsors for organic projects

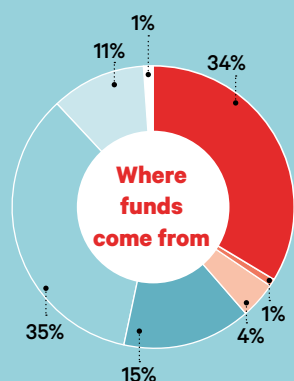

325 sponsors for access to water

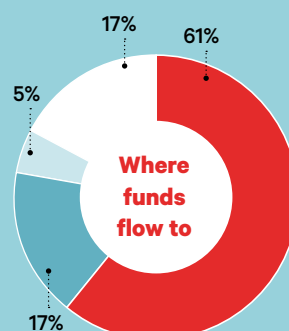

31,450 men and women

furthered their training in sustainable agroecological growing techniques, generally outdoors on the trial fields, in composting or in selecting indigenous seeds.

#MeToo: Impetus for change

In November 2018, SWISSAID adopted an effective policy for dealing with sexual exploitation, abuse and harassment – “no paper tiger”, as Daniele Polini, who is responsible, underlines.

Daniele, what prompted you to develop the policy?

The #MeToo debate and the discussions triggered by the “Oxfam” controversy triggered the development of the policy. The disparity in power between donors and beneficiaries as well as the patriarchal social structures in some countries of deployment can lead to incidents of this kind.

Are sexual harassment, exploitation and abuse an issue at SWISSAID?

Several years ago, there was a case of sexual harassment among local employees at SWISSAID. This case was investigated promptly and exhaustively at the time. The accused worker was immediately released from his duties and later dismissed without notice. The victim received support, and discretion was maintained. SWISSAID dealt with the matter professionally at the time. Now we have cast the implicit policy of the aid organisation into a written and binding form in a participatory process.

Who is the policy aimed at?

It is an integral part of all employment contracts and is thus aimed at all staff at home and abroad, all partner organisations on the ground and all contractors. The beneficiaries are also included. Donors are increasingly calling for suitable policies and structures.

Isn't it wishful thinking to imagine that beneficiaries who have been abused would report these cases?

Appropriate structures must certainly be put in place. For example, we could imagine having “boxes” in the villages where the messages could be left anonymously. More specifically, SWISSAID is holding workshops in all countries to explain our position and to outline measures. Victims can generally go to their specially trained contact person on site or report the case directly to the managing director or the head of Human Resources in Switzerland. Every message sent to confidential@swissaid.ch is investigated quickly, discretely and thoroughly – to protect both the victim and the accused.

What practical steps can be taken to ensure that this does not happen?

What is crucial is a climate in which equality is a matter of course. It is true that sexual harassment is less common in societies where everyone has an equal say in decision-making. For this reason, SWISSAID's projects, which always place emphasis on equality, also contribute towards creating a world where there is no place for sexual harassment, abuse and exploitation.

Agroecology: Where farmers engage in research

There is so much more to agroecology than just new farming methods. There is a focus on shared local knowledge. SWISSAID also taps into this resource.

In April 2018, the UN Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) adopted “The 10 Elements of Agroecology”, a guideline for decision-makers and practitioners in agroecology. One of these ten elements consists of co-creation and the sharing of knowledge.

Agroecology depends on context-specific knowledge. There are no hard and fast recipes, but rather principles and practices tailored to fit the environmental, social or economic climate. Co-creation and the sharing of knowledge among farmers therefore plays a pivotal role.

SWISSAID has supported the farmers’ movement “Campesino a Campesino” in national programmes in Latin America for many years. This successful partner organisation not only appreciates and uses traditional knowledge, it also creates innovations through experimental field trials.

Greater yields thanks to agroecology

If farming families see new procedures “in use” on comparable farms, they are more willing and able to take them on board and apply them themselves.

The ten agroecology experts from SWISSAID agreed on this at last year’s exchange meeting. Farmers learn from other farmers. This is demonstrated in many SWISSAID national programmes when farmers consult each other after the courses and over longer distances, for example on WhatsApp.

Innovation through participatory processes not only builds trust, it also produces results. Yields in India increased by between 27 and 138%, depending on the cultivation system. An average increase in income of 27% was achieved with the SRI rice growing system in combination with pulses. Success depended on the type of local seeds chosen, the combination of different crops or the measures applied to conserve soil or water.

Complementary academic research

We have worked with research institutes to validate and improve the impact of agroecological practices. In Niger, for example, the University of Tillabéry has been analysing the biochemical characteristics of soils. In this way, organic fertilising techniques have been improved. Knowledge of farming is often not recognised by political decision-makers. For this reason, we are also seeking collaboration with formal research, such as with the ETH in Tanzania, to complement research by farmers.

Needless to say, the approach of research by farmers has its drawbacks: farmers are not used to recording and documenting their experiments tidily. However, this is an important requirement for precise analysis. That said, the prevailing considerations are positive. A lot of support, guidance and motivation is needed for participatory farming research to succeed.

Sarah Mader

Working together, the farmers are strong – and can learn from each other.

New impetus in development policy

A new team took over the Development Policy Department in 2018 and is championing the right to food and a sustainable economy. This commitment requires staying power, but we are making progress bit by bit.

Under pressure from civil society, the Swiss government signed the UN Declaration on the Rights of Peasants and Other People Working in Rural Areas last year, and the decision was taken to declare the origin of imported gold. The commodity trading sector agreed to follow the guidelines drawn up by three Swiss NGOs, including SWISSAID.

Having said that, the most important political decisions still lie ahead; be it the corporate responsibility initiative, the framework for free trade agreements or Switzerland's positioning on genetically modified seeds. We will do everything we can to influence these issues in line with development cooperation objectives and keep you abreast of the latest developments.

Céline Kohlprath, Head of Development Policy

No chance? No way!
The kids show the pros how it's done.

Trinket anniversary: The craziest game of the year

When 3 professional footballers take on 70 children, everyone's a winner – especially the kids: they kept putting the ball into the corner, getting the better of Marco Schönbächler from FC Zurich, Milan Vilotic from FC St Gallen and Liridon Mulaj from Neuchâtel Xamax FCS. SWISSAID had organised the friendly match for the children at Zurich's Letzigrund as a way of saying thank you to them, representing the generations of children who had sold trinkets on the streets over the last 70 years, thus helping thousands of people in developing countries. Kids, you're the greatest! Many thanks!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

SWISSAID in Zurich: A handful of committed and motivated Zurich residents had had enough of standing by and watching. They wanted to do something themselves to fight poverty, hunger and oppression – and founded SWISSAID Zurich. The association stirred up the political scene last year with inspiring events and heated discussions. New members are welcome: zuerich@swissaid.ch

Fair Food Initiative: SWISSAID supported the Fair Food Initiative with an excellently staffed and informative event, which would have brought significant improvements for producers in developing countries – albeit in vain unfortunately. Nevertheless, we were very pleased with the unexpectedly large public interest.

Taking a stand on violence against women with "Taminique": Model Tamy Glauser and ex-Miss Switzerland Dominique Rinderknecht campaigned against violence against women in India with video clips, lending their support to SWISSAID's projects in that area. The public was persuaded by both of them, and thus by SWISSAID.

COMMENTS ON THE ANNUAL ACCOUNTS

Monika Uhlmann
Head of Finance + Logistics

2018 wasn't an easy year for SWISSAID: increasing requirements by donors for project design and reporting coincided with heightened competition on the donations market. And there was political pressure on the Federal Government's development aid budget, to boot. These tough conditions are reflected in the annual result: fundraising revenue remained well below expectations. Selective cost-cutting measures were implemented, resulting in only a slight deficit. With the introduction of new project management mechanisms, the greater focus on our core themes and the consistent alignment of our fundraising activities, we firmly believe that we are well positioned for the future.

Backed by a highly motivated international team, SWISSAID was able to support self-help projects worth 10.7 million Swiss francs. Measured in terms of operating expenditure, 61% of funds went into the southern hemisphere. We used 17% of the funds for information and awareness-raising work on development policy in Switzerland.

There is still much to be done to enable peasant farming families in the poorest regions to take control of their own lives, eat a balanced diet throughout the year and prepare for the effects of climate change. We want to play our part and bring about lasting changes. For this, we are dependent on you, our many donors – long-standing and newly recruited alike – as well as our institutional sponsors. You make it possible for SWISSAID to implement its programme with your generous donations and contributions. Thanks!

SWISSAID at a glance

SWISSAID is an independent foundation, without any religious or political affiliation, with its registered office in Bern, Switzerland. SWISSAID has committed itself since 1948 to championing the causes of the disadvantaged people of the southern hemisphere in rural areas where there are no other organisations on hand to support them. SWISSAID battles for the right of all people to lead their lives free from hunger, want and oppression. We are driven by the firm belief that poverty should not be anyone's fate. Our key areas of work are the fight against hunger, agroecology, gender equality and support for civil society.

In addition to implementing self-help projects in the South, we also lobby policymakers in Switzerland in order to safeguard the interests of the poor people of the southern hemisphere.

Improving lives in the southern hemisphere hinges on social change in the northern hemisphere. We base our activities upon the expertise, experience and needs of our partner organisations in nine project countries in Africa, Asia and Latin America (Guinea-Bissau, Niger, Chad, Tanzania, India, Myanmar, Colombia, Ecuador and Nicaragua).

HOW WE OPERATE

SWISSAID supports initiatives undertaken by disadvantaged people in the Third World and works in tandem with non-governmental organisations. We provide aid and support our partner organisations at institutional level. This enables them to achieve a sense of independence and to take control of their economic, social and political lives. We do not shy away from confronting international corporations; this is always done with a view towards encouraging the local communities and giving them the ability to help themselves.

SWISSAID works with local experts and rarely seconds Swiss experts to the southern hemisphere. Apart from anchoring projects more effectively in the local context, this also leads to a transfer of know-how and to job creation in the southern hemisphere. This helps to bring down programme-support costs, leaving a greater proportion of the donations available to help the people affected help themselves.

Members of the Board of Trustees are appointed for four years. They can be re-elected. The period of office of the members of the Board of Trustees Committee is four years, and they can be re-elected twice, although longer terms may be agreed in justified cases.

Appendix to the annual accounts

0. Number of full-time equivalents	The average number of full-time equivalents over the year stood at 177 (same as the previous year).
1. General accounting principles	Accounts are rendered on the basis of the SWISS GAAP FER 21 / core-FER accounting recommendations and this procedure is conducted in accordance with the Swiss Code of Obligations, ZEWO regulations (agency governing charitable organisations which collect donations), as well as in accordance with the provisions of the Deed of Foundation and Regulations. The securities result is posted directly applying the gross principle with records of book profits and losses directly via the income statement.
2. Consolidated group	The accounts of the coordination offices which are responsible for implementing the southern hemisphere programmes as well as SWISSAID Geneva and SWISSAID Zurich Associations are integrated fully into these annual accounts. SWISSAID does not have any subsidiaries or partner institutions over which it has a controlling influence.
3. Associated organisations	The following organisations and institutions have close associations with SWISSAID: Alliance Sud (working group comprising SWISSAID, Fastenopfer, Brot für alle, Helvetas, Caritas, Heks), SWISSAID Geneva Association, Max Havelaar Foundation, SAG (Swiss Working Group on Genetic Engineering), and Stop OGM. Contractually, Alliance Sud received CHF 365,418 of the annual budget. SWISSAID is represented among the other organisations on the board, without the allocation of substantial contributions. Unpaid services provided by third parties to SWISSAID only account for an insignificant proportion of the overall result and are, therefore, not listed.
4. Accounting and valuation principles	Cash and cash equivalents	At nominal value.
	Securities	Market value on the balance sheet date.
	Foreign currencies	Exchange rate on the balance sheet date.
	Loans, accounts receivable and finance pledges	Nominal value.
	Inventories	At cost less necessary valuation adjustments.
	Financial assets	Acquisition value less linear business management depreciation.
	Real estate in Switzerland	Acquisition value less scheduled linear depreciation. The property is not subject to depreciation. Period of use: 75 years.
	Property abroad	Acquisition value less scheduled linear depreciation.
	Furnishings, machinery and plant	Acquisition value less scheduled linear depreciation. Period of use: furnishings 10 years, IT equipment 3 years, machinery 3-6 years. Activation limit: CHF 3,000 (IT: CHF 1000).
	Liabilities	At nominal value.
	Reserves	The amount is based on management's estimate and reflects expected future expenses at the balance sheet date.
	Investments under construction	Information technology projects over several years are not depreciated. These newly constructed assets are not depreciated until they are commissioned and allocated to their asset categories.
4.1 Posting of revenues	Free donations, earmarked donations and contributions to projects	Revenue from fundraising for the general public is recorded when payment is received. If there is an instruction from the donor, it is recorded as an earmarked donation and without an instruction as a free donation.
	Legacies	Revenue from legacies and inheritances is recorded either at the time the payment is received (for monetary amounts) or at the time the legal disposal value is transferred (for real estate, etc.).
	Subscriptions	Revenue from finance agreements with donors is recorded at the time the payment is received.
	Project mandates	Revenue from project mandates is recorded at the time the contract is signed and the associated financing commitment is made.
	Deliverables / services	Deliveries of goods and services are recorded as revenue at the time they are rendered.
	Rental revenue	Rental revenue is recorded as income at the time payment is made.

THANKS

Danke • Merci • Thank you • Gracias • Grazie

Children are the first to suffer in times of hardship. Thanks for helping them!

We would like to extend our sincerest thanks to all our donors for their generous support over the past year. Thanks to their commitment and their solidarity, we can help people to help themselves in the countries of the southern hemisphere. In addition to many individuals, we also receive support from numerous companies and suppliers who have provided their services at particularly favourable rates or free of charge, as well as from institutions, cantons, local authorities, parish councils and Third World groups.

We are particularly grateful to the following organisations:

Swiss Agency for Development and Cooperation (SDC), Geneva Federation for Cooperation (FGC), Vaud Federation for Cooperation (FEDEVACO), Liechtenstein Development Service (LED)

Cantons:

Aargau, Appenzell AR, Basel City, Bern, Graubünden, Thurgau and Valais
